The loss with his hated foes, the Yankees, in Jackson county, Tenn., near his native home. The loss of Col. Hamilton is much to be regretted, and we would fain hope that the report of his death is false, but for the apparent reliability of the news as it comes to us. By his skill and bravery, united with a thorough knowledge of the country, Colonel Hamilton has heretofore haffled all the efforts of the enemy to drive him and his gallant followers from the border mountain counties of the upper Cumberland. By his death the Yankees have gotten rid of one of their chief sources of annoyance in Middle Tennousee.
